Sainsbury's

I've never set a trap or held a spear,
I roll up with my credit card and pay,
I've never suffered want or felt the fear
Of being unfed for even half a day.
I've never pulled a plough or worked a grove,
Nor grown a spud or even caught a fish,
I own a fridge, a freezer and a stove,
A rack of herbs and spices for each dish.
Each week I go round Sainsbury's with my trolley,
Where food is lined up neatly, all in rows,
To ask where it all comes from is just folly
As long as someone in this building knows.
I smile, surveying more than I could eat
In ten years, maybe twenty! Life is sweet!
